She is an ILF Ambassador to the Innocent Lives Foundation. She's also a recipient of first a Silver and then a Black Badge from her team's second and first place wins in the TraceLabs OSINT CTFs, including the DEF CON edition at DEF CON 28. A founding member of DC209, a DEF CON group, she enjoys sharing her knowledge and bringing more humans into the hacking community, as well as raising chickens and experimenting with bio-hacking egg and feather colors.

Alethe has presented both talks and workshops at a variety of conferences and events, including keynoting a local high school level hackathon and judging a global Collegiate SECTF competition. She's passionate about protecting kids online through the Innocent Lives Foundation and her fundraising efforts, but also determined to get more young humans involved in every aspect of hacking to teach these critical skills to the next generation of hackers
